PROCESSOR REGISTERS HAVING STATE INFORMATION

Abstract of the Disclosure

Methods and apparatus are provided for implementing an efficient processor having state information included in each register. A processor has registers configured to hold both data and state information, such as carry and overflow information. State information and data can be read and written in the same operation. Holding state information along with data in the same register can provide a variety of benefits, particularly in the context of multithreaded programmable chips.